

WILLIMANTIC

The committee having in charge the Christmas roll call for the Red Cross has the work well organized. It is planned to carry on an intensive campaign such as was carried on for the Liberty bonds. Teams are being appointed to make a house to house canvass and to thoroughly canvass all through the district. The first of the campaign will be at North Windham tonight where the cause will be presented, and pledges taken in an effort to "cover the top" the first night. So great is the faith of the American Red Cross in the American people that no quotas have been assigned to Red Cross chapters for the enrollment of 17 chapters in the Red Cross Christmas Roll Call Universal membership is the goal.

The December meeting of the Young People's Society of St. Paul's Episcopal church was held with Misses Judge at their home, 11 South street, Wednesday night. After business there was a social hour. Lunch was served at the close of the evening's programme.

Door bells are being overworked at present by the children of the Natheaus and Windham street schools, who are most persistent in their efforts to sell tickets for a pre-Christmas entertainment, which is to be given to raise a sufficient sum so that the pupils of the two schools may be enrolled in the Junior Red Cross auxiliary.

Contrary to the rule as to business meetings, they are very popular at the girls' club, possibly because of the interest of the meetings and possibly because of the social hour that always follows. There was a large number present at the December meeting last night, and the evening was one of real enjoyment. The rummage sale committee reported that the sum of $15 had been cleared at the sale. The nominating committee for the 1919 officers was appointed, and five committees to manage the big Christmas party, scheduled for December 19th, which is to take the form of a gathering of the clubs to which all former members will be invited. It was voted of the mayor, $2,500 was voted for the purchase of the city yard to be used for the storage of tools, personal property, etc. of the city. On the question of locality mention was made of the land and buildings on Watson street formerly used by Mrs. Garrity as a coal yard. It was said that this property could be bought for $1,900. Some objection was made that the property was not centrally located and the matter was finally left to the common council to decide. The property near the Natchaug river given by the will of Charles A. Capen for a city park was declined, and City Clerk Scripture was instructed to ask the judge of probate. It has been the general opinion that the land is too remote from the center of the city to be used for a city park.

After the completion of the business the meeting adjourned.

Monday evening a large number of British residents of this town met in Krauss' hall at 8 o'clock in the evening to celebrate the coming of peace. The people of Plainfield should do so to celebrate British day, next Saturday, Dec. 7th. Arrangements were made that on Saturday evening a dance and social be held in Krauss' hall. Sunday morning a parade is to be formed somewhere down town and headed by the British band. The parade is to be to St. Paul's church for patriotic services. The people present were to ask all relatives and friends to participate in this parade and by doing so to show respect for the great part Britannia has taken in the world strife. All the world knows what Great Britain's forces have been doing on all fronts for the past four years, so in return the people of Plainfield are expected to participate and make this parade a great success. A committee of four men was elected to put this enterprise over the top: Zeek Tetlow, John Kay, Joseph Hargraves, John Jencks and Thomas Rhodes.

Saturday night a harvest supper was held at the Episcopal church. There was an interesting program after the supper which many enjoyed. A surprise birthday party was given Mr. Wildes of Canterbury by his mill

Eat more oranges and be healthier

Dr. Kellogg, head of the famous Battle Creek Sanitarium, says that "Oranges furnish an abundant supply of the most delicate and wholesome of all food acids."

Other equally well-known authorities agree that oranges possess great food and health values. Physicians of every school join in their praise.

Officials of the national food administration encourage the liberal use of oranges as a means of conserving the country's supply of grains and meats.

Buy only known-to-be-good oranges and get your money's full worth

There are oranges and oranges—most of them good, but some better than others. It pays to exercise care when buying, selecting the choicest.

Appearance is not a safe guide in purchasing oranges. With them real beauty is more than skin-deep. The juice content is the true test.

The world's choicest oranges are those grown in Florida groves. When ripened on the trees, they are filled with delicious juice, so sweet as to require no sugar, and finely flavored.

Sealdsweet trade-mark on oranges your assurance of quality fruit

Progressive Florida growers, cooperating in the non-profit Florida Citrus Exchange, give their groves the care needed to produce choice oranges, which they pick, pack and market to insure delivery to consumers in good condition.

The oranges produced by these growers are sold under the Sealdsweet trade-mark—let it be your guide and protection in buying. Then you will know that the fruit will give you full value for your money.

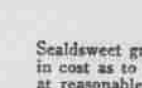

Sealdsweet oranges cost no more than others. They are sold by up-to-date fruit dealers in most places. Ask your dealer to supply you Sealdsweet oranges.

"I come from fruitful sunny Florida with a message of health and strength. They who follow my advice and who take that which I prescribe will be able to do more in the world's work and to better enjoy life."
